
Nowadays, synthesizers and keyboards dominate the music industry. But there's a time and a place for vintage instruments like the Hammond organ, theremin or Human Voice. That time is now! Native Instruments has released an incredible sample pack by Christian Wunderlich called Action Strings [Kontakt]. It is packed with classic drums, brass and violin sounds as well as drones and atmospheres. All of this features high-quality round robins that will inspire your next dance hit or electronic symphony! About Christian Wunderlich: Christian Wunderlich is a composer and piano player from Germany. Over his 25 years of experience he has made a name for himself in both the film and studio music industry. He's been composing orchestral scores for movies, tv series and documentaries, producing soundtracks for TV commercials, composing music for big events like the Formula 1 or the Miss Germany beauty contest and having his own symphonic concerts all over Europe. In 2014 he released the album Lovefool which was played throughout Europe on German radio stations such as NDR or Arte. He released his latest album last December called Away.

About Native Instruments: Native Instruments is a German company with its headquarters in Munich, Germany. Since 1987, the company has been designing and developing software instruments exclusively for the professional music making. The company was founded by Thomas Knipfel, who later sold his shares to Joachim Kemperling who is now CEO of Native Instruments. The development team consists of 100 developers from all over the world who are specialists in their musical field. The Primary area of product development are synthesizers and samplers for hardware and software workstations, individual instruments as well as integrated solutions for music making by musicians on stage or in the studio. They also make pro audio hardware, plugins, and mobile apps. Now Native Instruments has over 1000 products available for over 100 different platforms.
